Quite a number of Republican "lame ducks"—standpatters—gathered in Washington when the President was there. What a flock of them there will be after election, and what a job it will be for President Taft to mend all their broken political bones.

Senator Dick has not accepted Hon. John J. Lentz's challenge for a joint debate on the political questions that agitate the people of the State and Nation. His record wouldn't stand the thrills of Lentz for a minute, and no one knows it better than he of check-book fame. And there is nobody else, from Cox down to Harding, willing to take the job off his hands.

The Cincinnati Post and a few other big metropolitan tender feet are unduly excited about a few killings at the recent Vanderbilt car races, and either want them suppressed or called by their right names. The Post would have these little affairs called "Races for the Blood-Cursed Cup." If that enterprising journal will send a representative up to Celina we will point out enough vicious "blood-cursed cup" at the local cemetery, if laid side by side, to reach two blocks, and the cemeteries are but thinly populated. When we talk of suppressing the method of suicide up here they call it interfering with personal liberty. And our suicides are real benefactors, for they contribute largely to our taxes—according to their stay on earth and their capacity to get on the outside of bug juice. Of course the wives and children of the victims suffer a little inconvenience in short rations and scanty clothing—but they are d—d. Come up and see our "Races for the blood-cursed cup," week days and Sunday, too. It's great sport.

Champ Clark's Sizes Up Three Ohio Democrats

"It's a good deal more comfortable for a Democrat to come to Ohio now than it has been for some years past," said Congressman Champ Clark, prefacing an eulogy of Governor Harmon, Frank S. Monnett, candidate for Congress, and John J. Lentz, Democratic aspirant for United States Senator, at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium Thursday night.

"A Democratic Governor makes you feel at home. This state is fortunate to have a Governor like Harmon, whose name is a household word, and whose position in the hearts of the people of this nation promises to make him the Democratic choice for the Presidency."

"You are fortunate to have a candidate for the United States Senate like John J. Lentz, who is known and esteemed from sea to sea."

"You are fortunate in having a candidate from the capital district for Congressman like Frank S. Monnett, who has already won a national reputation as an opponent of corrupt power."—Columbus News, October 1.

5 per Cent Money to Loan

We are the only Loan Agency in Mercer County who are now able to close 5 per cent loans.

The records also show that the only loans since May at 5 per cent were made by us.

Brookhart & Murlin.

CAN'T UNLOAD ODOROUS DICK

His Nomination Made by Law—Only Democratic Legislature Can Defeat Him.

Every attempt that is made to repudiate the candidacy of Senator Dick for re-election merely emphasizes the fact that his nomination at the primaries in May was legal and regular, and therefore binding upon a Republican legislature if elected.

The Republican candidates for representative and state senator from Cuyahoga county have undertaken by resolution to renounce Dick by pledging themselves not to vote for him if elected. By so doing they virtually assume to repeal a state law while they are only candidates for office.

Dick was renominated for senator by over 143,000 votes cast at a primary according to a state law, known as the Bronson primary law. He is just as legally nominated for senator as Harding is for governor. He is just as legally nominated for senator from Ohio as LaFollette is for senator from Wisconsin.

Republican candidates for representative and state senator can not of their own free will repeal an act of the legislature any more than they could repeal an act of congress. By declaring in advance that they will not abide by the decision legally rendered at the May primaries they betray their readiness to violate the law. Candidates for office who thus proclaim their intention to break the law should not be entrusted with the sacred responsibility of making laws.

Dick's renomination by a vote of his party admirers at a primary held under the law is more binding upon Republican candidates for representative than Hanna's endorsement by conventions in 1897 and 1903, and more binding than Foraker's endorsement by convention in 1895 and 1901.

The only binding force of the endorsement given Hanna and Foraker was a party obligation to abide by an edict voluntarily proclaimed by a political convention, not provided for in any way nor required by statute. Dick's nomination is an edict declared by over 70 per cent of those who voted at his party's primary election in full accord and in full compliance with the primary law.

The Youngstown Telegram, a Republican paper, said recently:

"The Maine and Vermont elections forecast Senator Dick's defeat in his campaign for re-election in Ohio. If indeed he had not been certain before, if Dick has at least the welfare of the party that has honored him, he ought, like Governor Patterson of Tennessee, to withdraw and leave the field clear for a man who will represent the dominant progressive spirit of the times."

Commenting on what the Youngstown Telegram said, the Cleveland Leader (Rep.) said further:

"But Senator Dick will not resign. He should, of course. By such action he could save his party from threatened defeat and himself from inevitable humiliation. But his is the brand of statesmanship which never leaves the pit counter until pried loose."

In noticing what these two Republican papers had to say, the Ohio State Journal (Rep.), after quoting both, added:

"There is no circumstance that so threatens Republican success in Ohio as the candidacy of Senator Dick. He has a foothold through a false formality and a card index, and with these he pushes himself into prominence. It is the strangest thing in the political world that this man, who has been the devoted follower of Aldrichism and the interests, should have the ghost of a chance in Ohio."

All of which clearly recognizes Dick's candidacy. Its validity and vitality can not be escaped.

There is only one legal way, only one right and reliable way to make sure that Dick shall not be returned to the senate, and that is to elect a legislature with a Democratic majority in the house and in the senate.

The voters of this county and senatorial district who do not want Dick re-elected should vote against the Republican candidates for representative and state senator and VOTE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES FOR REPRESENTATIVE AND STATE SENATOR IN THIS COUNTY AND SENATORIAL DISTRICT.

Marker Makes It Plain.

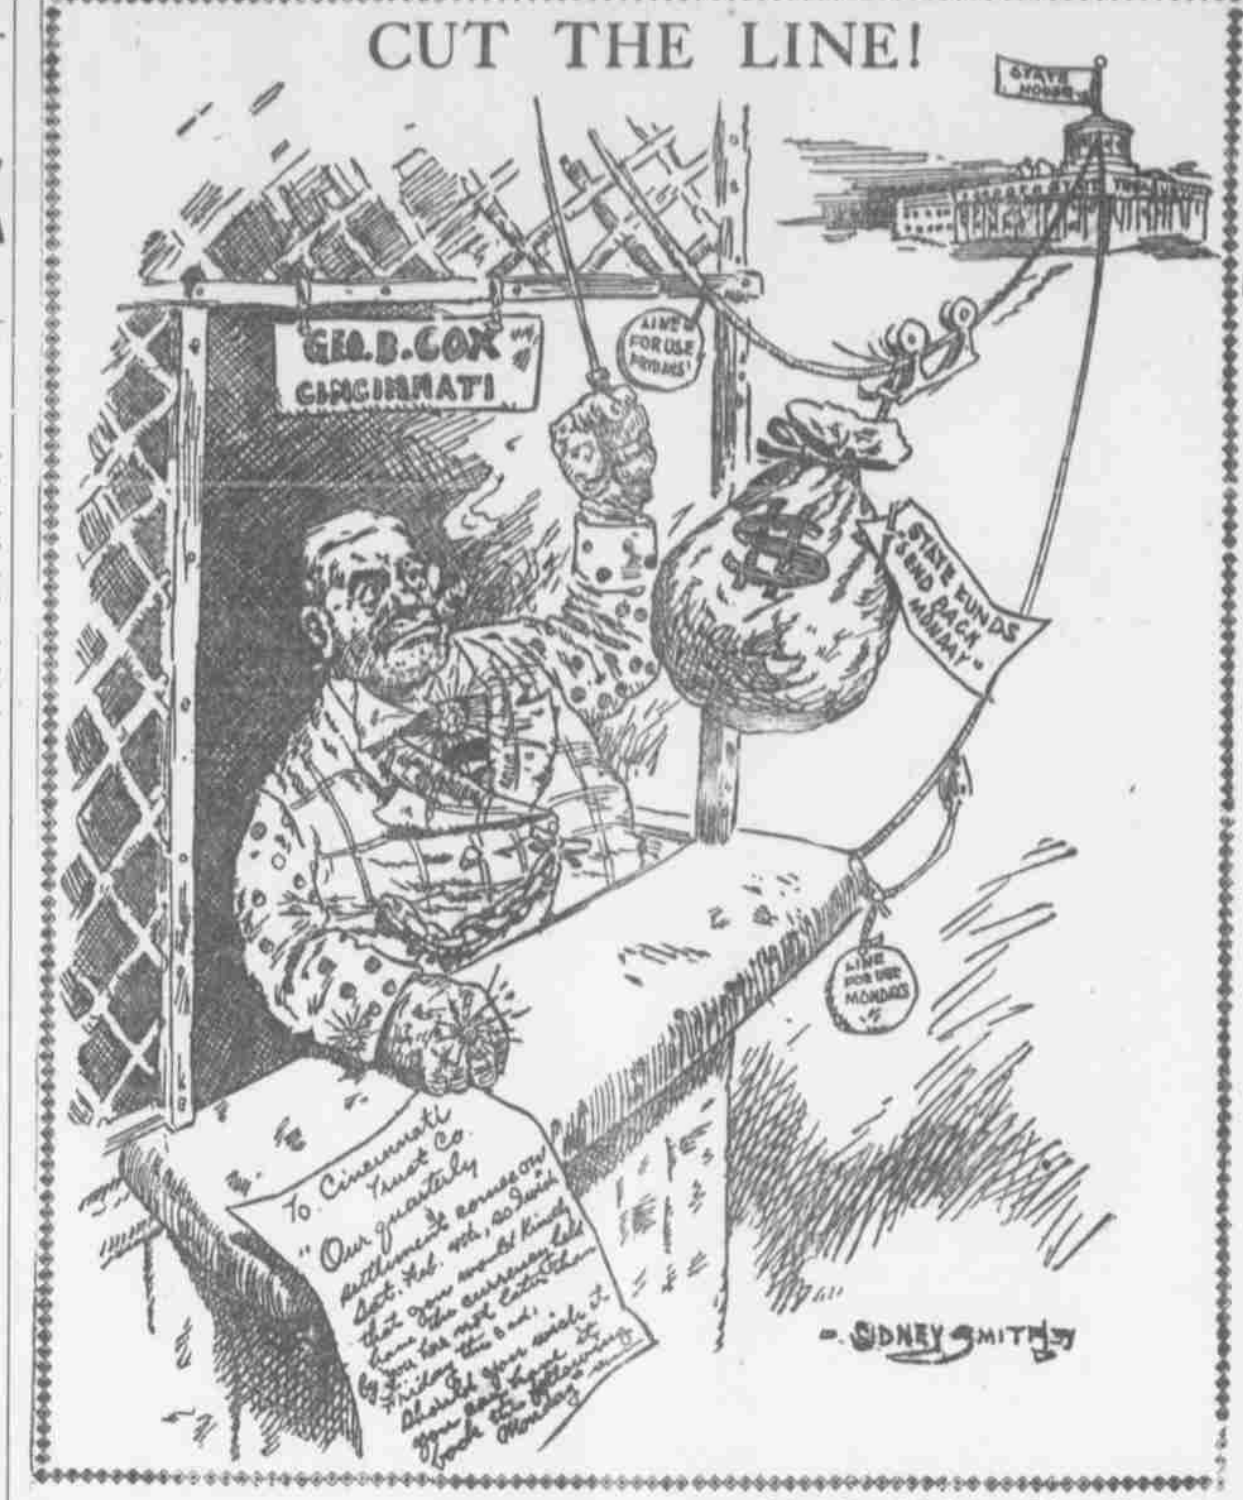

That man Marker, whom Governor Harmon named for chief engineer of the state board of public works, is laying bare some of the ways of the board by which the state paid for work and got little in return to show for the money. It's no wonder the Republican politicians don't like Harmon—and no wonder they want him defeated.—Youngstown Vindicator.

CAN YOU SEE IT?

With wool still dropping in price, it is no wonder that farmers are beginning to inquire into the reasons. Wool last year was 33 per cent higher than this year, and during that time the Aldrich-Taft-Payne tariff law went into effect. Farmers, laborers and everybody are paying high prices for woolen clothing, while wool has gone down, and they are coming to the conclusion that the tariff is a delusion and a farce. If you can't see it, it is because the defenders of the present tariff, from Taft to Harding, have "pulled the wool over your eyes."

It Looks Bad for You

To have sore eyes. Sutherland's Earle Eye Salve will cure them. Harmless and Painless. Guaranteed for 50 a tube.

What do the people of Ohio think of the "common enterprise" Governor Harmon revealed in his speech at the opening of the Democratic campaign at Canton?

What do the voters and taxpayers think of the system of financing—while Mr. Harding was Lieutenant Governor and "in good health"—when Cox added to his revenues by a quiet little understanding with his Republican friends at the Capitol?

What do they think of the agreeable and harmonious scheme planned by the plunderers and thus outlined by a Republican State Treasurer: "Our quarterly settlement comes on Saturday, February 4, so I wish that you would kindly have the currency held by you here not later than Friday, the 3d. SHOULD YOU WISH IT YOU CAN HAVE IT BACK THE FOLLOWING MONDAY."

The people of Ohio have been taught by the present executive the difference between an honest administration and the collusion of grafters. They know that with Judson Harmon on guard the old days of juggling with the people's money have passed away and a system of strict watchfulness and honesty has been adopted. They know this, not because he made promises two years ago, but because for two years he has kept every promise, has exposed and routed the grafters and has MADE GOOD.

PROBLEMS OF OHIO FARMERS

Discussed by Governor Harmon at Famous Farmers' Picnic Near Cuyahoga Falls.

At the farmers' picnic at Silver Lake, near Cuyahoga Falls, Aug. 27, Governor Harmon was the chief speaker of the day. There were 15,000 people present. The governor partook of a splendid picnic dinner prepared for him and mingled with the throng until the appointed time for his address which was strictly nonpartisan and dealt with the problems the farmer has to face.

Speaking of farmers as a class the governor said: "God never made a better class of people than the class of men who work out the yearly miracle of wresting from the soil that which feeds the nation."

He said the American farmers are the only ones who own their land in fee simple. The average size of their farms is much greater than in other countries. Yet the farms of Europe produce much greater crops than ours, and we are rapidly approaching the time when our exports of farm products must cease if things go on as they are. To obviate this danger the governor said three things are needed:

1. To make the farmer's labor and equipment more productive by bringing science into the harness by agricultural farms, teaching of agriculture, proper choice of seed and fertilizers. In all of these the help of the state is proper and necessary. Also in destroying the various pests which always seek to destroy the fruits of the farmer's work.

2. Good roads to haul products to market or point of shipment. Power is money as well as time, and the waste of power from bad roads cuts down the farmer's profits.

3. Keeping their money for their own use after they have raised good crops, hauled them over good roads and sold them at a fair price. The farmers sell at prices fixed by the buyers, and buy what they need at prices fixed by the sellers. Trusts and combinations to control prices must be met by enforcement of the laws against them. Care and diligence will protect against the various devices directed against earnings. But one growing cause of depleting the farmer's income is entirely under their own control—taxes. Every dollar spent by the state and national government has to be raised by taxation, and it is notorious that farmers pay more than their fair share.

The governor said he was glad to help pass the law which limits the total taxes to be collected under the new appraisement to the same amount in money collected this year under the old appraisement. He had hoped for a law making a limit of 1 per cent, but it was made 1 1/2 per cent instead. He hoped next winter to have this changed to 1 per cent for all purposes, unless the people should vote further taxes on proposals submitted to them stating the exact purpose in view and the amount to be raised.

It was at the close of his address at this picnic that Governor Harmon was asked to lead the audience in singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," in lieu of the usual hand-shaking, because the assemblage was so large that he could not shake hands with all present.

If You Have Any Doubt

Of the merit of Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, one bottle will remove that doubt and you are left at the same time. Look for the bell on the bottle. It is the genuine.

ALDEN TOD WHITE

My son was taken with acute tuberculosis the latter part of last June and was under treatment of our family physician for three months when he called a specialist on tuberculosis, who also pronounced the case pulmonary tuberculosis. He continued to grow worse and on the 24th day of September I put him on Nature's Creation. His case could not have been much worse—he could not retain any food, coughed almost continuously and became so reduced in flesh and strength that he could not walk.

He commenced to improve rapidly on first bottle and after taking the second bottle he had gained seventeen pounds and is now a perfect picture of health—could not be better.

I write this for the benefit of others who may be suffering with this most dreaded disease.

Sincerely, MRS. E. WHITE.

Please note that our testimonials are all from people whom you can call on and talk to personally and not from other parts of the country. A handsome booklet, sent postpaid upon request to The Nature's Creation Co., Bank Bldg., Town and Erie, Columbus.

S. E. STRODE, Democratic Nominee for Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Secretary Ohio State Grange, Farmers' Institute Lecturer, and Associate Editor, National Stockman and Farmer. A combination of a good education and splendid executive ability, reinforced by a rare knowledge of human nature and fondness for exposing frauds, peculiarly equip him for the position. Opponent is a candidate for the third term. "One good term deserves another," but third terms mean "resting on honors won," "furthering personal ambitions," and "swelling private bank accounts." First term means "activity," "enthusiasm" and a "making good." Monarchies practice perpetuation in office, but "new blood" is the hope of republics.

REAL PROGRESSIVE DEFINED BY HOGAN

At Canton Opening—Why People Revolt Against Stand-Pat Officials.

HOGAN'S HITS.

Behind the fortified walls of a prohibitive tariff gigantic combinations and trusts have been formed.

A progressive Republican is one who loves Democratic principles and wants to adopt them.

What can we expect of Ohio, where Republican insurgency is rampant with a "stand-pat" platform and a "hitched-tight" candidate for governor? and a "hitched-tighter" candidate for United States senator?

Our opponents insist that graft is not a party question. This does not come well from those who offered their protection to the grafters two years ago and who would be silent now were they not driven from under cover by Governor Harmon.

The need of a legal adviser in full sympathy with the administration is most apparent, and I trust that the re-election of Governor Harmon will also insure the election of all his associates on the state ticket.

Timothy S. Hogan, candidate on the Democratic ticket for attorney general, is one of the gifted orators of Ohio. In his speech at the Democratic campaign opening at Canton he made a number of happy hits. His speech follows in full:

I am grateful to the distinguished chairman of the state executive committee and his worthy associates for the great honor conferred upon me in my selection as one of the trio of speakers for this occasion.

It is always an honor to advocate the principles of true Democracy, and surely it is with both pleasure and pride that I now uphold these principles at a time when they are sustained by ballot and by expression throughout this broad land. We have marched faithfully on behind the Democratic banner through years and years of disappointment and adversity, and it is any wonder that our hearts throb with joy and enthusiasm as we behold the flags of victory hoisted, one by one, over all our Democratic citadels?

The armies of Democracy were never more united, more harmonious, more confident and more determined than now, while the ranks of our Republican brothers are scattered hopelessly. We Democrats realize that our cause is now, as it has ever been, a true and just and honest and patriotic one, while a large portion of the Republican party has been forced to open rebellion because of the broken promises of their leaders.

Under the alluring theory that the tariff was created solely and entirely for the protection of the toilers of this country, the duties on the necessities of life have been steadily increased, until behind the fortified walls of a prohibitive tariff, gigantic combinations and trusts have been formed, which are accumulating wealth beyond the dreams of avarice, while the laboring man, unable to supply his family with bread and clothing, is demanding the cause of the high cost of living.

During the last presidential campaign, the advocates of the ridiculous theory that "the foreigner paid the tax" were compelled to admit its fallacy, and in order to perpetuate themselves in offices and further enrichment, they appealed to the voters for re-election by solemnly promising to revise the tariff downward, and thereby reduce the cost of living to our people. How that promise was kept is now a matter of history. Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, supported by the other stand-pat senators, and Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, supported by our representatives in congress from Ohio, effectually throttled all legislation and forced the passage of the most iniquitous tariff bill we have ever known.

This wanton violation of the most sacred promises made before the last election to the American people, this perfidy and double-dealing on the part of our representatives in congress, has aroused the righteous indignation of every true American citizen.

Thousands of the strongest men in the Republican party have been branded "insurgents" by the "machine," because they have repudiated Aldrich and Cannon, and have the courage to demand that those promises shall be fulfilled.

The disclosures of corruption in high places, brought to light by forced investigation, as notably the case in which it is shown that a member of the president's cabinet was involved in a gigantic plot to absorb the coal lands of Alaska, covering an area greater than the combined coal territory of Pennsylvania and West Virginia; the case of the sugar trust, which, not satisfied with the huge profits received under a high tariff, had stolen millions of dollars from the government and returned three millions of the booty in the hope of defeating criminal prosecution, which is now singularly delayed. These are only a few of the reasons why the citizens of the nation demand that we give them candidates in whom they can place their trust; whose promises for a revision of the tariff will not be made subject to the will and approval of Aldrich and Cannon; who will have the courage to vote on every question in the interests of the masses, rather than in the interests of the few; men whose acts will show that their first obligation is to man, and not to a greated wealth. Time was when the Republican party was a house united, but how do we find it now? The bitterest attacks upon policies of the party are contained in the Republican platforms of many of the states. Who is this new character known as "The Progressive Republican"? Why has he come? What is an "insurgent," anyway? A prominent lawyer of Ohio was asked the other day his definition of a "Progressive Republican," and promptly came the response: "A Progressive Republican is a man who loves Democratic principles, and wants to adopt them; one who fondly looks back on the days of Lincoln and sees the danger of standing pat; in short, a Progressive Republican is an up-to-date Democrat."

The star of Democracy never shone with greater splendor than now; now, when her principles are advocated by the united members of her own party and, too, advocated and adopted by one-half the following of the Republican party. The stand-patter is doomed to defeat. There is Maine, gone Democratic. Rock-ribbed Republican Maine! Whether it be due to the regulars or due to the progressives, we know not; but we do know that it was the work of a people interested in the success and welfare of their state and of the nation. The people do not like Aldrichism and Cannonism. They revolt against them. Insurgent movements we learn was weak in Maine. This being true, what can we expect of Ohio, where Republican insurgency is rampant with a "stand-pat" platform and a "hitched-tighter" candidate for governor? and a "hitched-tighter" candidate for United States senator?

The glorious victory in Maine is an inspiration indeed to Ohio Democracy. It is the most tremendous political upheaval that has taken place in any distinctively New England state since Abraham Lincoln was nominated for president. It foretells overwhelming Republicanism throughout the country on Nov. 8. If the Republicans lost Maine, how can they hope to win in Ohio, with its strong and aggressive Democracy united under the matchless leader—Judson Harmon—the best governor of the best state in the Union? The conservatives must not delude themselves with the thought that the new progressive movement will soon wane and the former order of things be restored. The insurgency in the Republican party is a protest against greed, frenzied finance and monopoly; nay, more, multitudes in the United States have felt long since that this government, as we have it, is not "of the people, for the people and by the people." There is a return to the principles upon which our nation was founded, principles which have been but too often almost forgotten.

The Republican candidates for state office in Ohio, at the Kenton meeting, committed themselves to the stand-pat policies. In so doing, were they standing for the people, or for the old guard? The answer I have to give is not that of a Democrat, but that of a Republican daily paper of Ohio, of eminent respectability and high standing. The Ohio State Journal of Sept. 14, in speaking of the Maine election, says editorially: "It is undoubtedly the people's work. No one must suppose that the progressives got together and organized a conspiracy to defeat the Republican party. That may be the stand-pat idea, but it is far from the truth. The progressive contingent was the creature of a public sentiment that didn't like the way things were going. They didn't like Aldrichism and Cannonism, and if it wasn't for this, the progressives would probably never have been heard of."

"It was the people opposing certain prevailing tendencies that projected the so-called insurgency in the political arena. It was not Beveridge, Murdock or LaFollette. They could not have helped it if they had tried. The people got the idea that stand-patism was on the side of the interests. They discerned this attitude in the tariff bill, the railroad bill, the ship subsidy bill and in the oppressive sway of the speaker."

"The suspicion became rampant in the formation of party opinion, and formulated a new expression of Republican doctrine, represented in what is known as progressiveness, and this new phase of party purpose seems to dominate the situation; it seems to say we must not occupy the old camps any longer; we must move to new ones, to higher ones, where the sun of progress shines for all."

With such an argument, from such a source, what more is needed to convince a reasonable man that the days of the stand-pat platform are numbered?

A few words as to the campaign in our own state. Two years ago we candidates on the Democratic state ticket exposed the graft and corruption that existed among Republican officials at the statehouse. The candidates on the Republican ticket remained silent and by their silence protected the guilty and unworthy. We submit to the voters of this state that substantially every charge that was then made has been found true. Countless graft dollars have already been returned to the state and there are many more coming when the truth is ascertained. Our opponents insist that graft is not a party question. This does not come well from those who offered their protection to the grafters two years ago and who would be silent upon that question now were they not driven from under cover by Governor Harmon.

If I am elected attorney general of Ohio I will endeavor to do my duty in all things, and prosecute graft without any reference to party. The need of a legal adviser in full sympathy with the administration is most apparent, and I trust that the re-election of Governor Harmon will also insure the election of all his associates on the state ticket.

The people want a Democratic reign in the glorious state of Ohio, and I think the time has come when we will have it; when we can usher into the massive statehouse our honored candidates, one and all, and bid them serve in the good old Democratic way—the way of honest, noble-hearted Judson Harmon, and the great party which he represents.
